0915 – 0945 The law firm of the future is already here — just not in most firms

The legal market is not on the cusp of change. It has already changed. Three forces are now converging: AI that compresses input costs and expands the addressable market; capital that is rewriting what a law firm can build and how fast; and a gathering talent war that firms without a compelling equity story will struggle to win. Pour AI into a law firm built for a pre-AI world and it disappears without trace. The firms pulling away are the ones rethinking all three together. Crispin Passmore – who helped design the ABS framework in England and Wales, advised the Arizona Supreme Court on its landmark reforms, and now advises investors and law firms in the UK, US, and across the world – opens the conference by mapping what is actually happening in the global legal market, and what every firm needs to decide before someone else decides for them.

Keynote speaker
Crispin Passmore Founder and Chair, Passmore & Oliver Partners, London

0945 – 1100 'Look up, look out, look forward' – law firm management in an age of change, disruption and innovation

The panel of experienced law firm leaders will share their thoughts on law firm leadership in an age of change, disruption and innovation, covering issues such as personal leadership style and skills, their approach to key issues such as culture, strategy and clients, and preparing the next generation of law firm leaders.
